

Course Competency Report by Code

Code: C180

Introduction to Psychology (C180)

Course of Study: C180 - Introduction to Psychology
Course Level: Undergraduate
Course Division: General Education
Discipline: Psychology
Course Type:
Department: General Education

COMPETENCY #	COMPETENCY NAME	COMPETENCY TEXT
138.1.1	Research in Psychology	The graduate analyzes how the scientific method is used in psychology.
138.1.2	Neurobiology	The graduate analyzes the role and function of the brain, nervous system, and endocrine system in human psychology.
138.1.3	Stages of Development	The graduate examines key developmental milestones across the lifespan.
138.1.4	Social Cognition	The graduate examines the processes of social cognition and their effects on social interactions.
138.1.5	Behaviorism and Learning Theories	The graduate examines the relationships among classical, operant, and observational learning theories.
138.1.6	Intelligence and Memory	The graduate examines the relationships between intelligence and memory.
138.1.7	Emotion, Motivation, and Personality	The graduate examines the significant characteristics of major theories of emotion, motivation, and personality.
138.1.8	Psychological Disorders	The graduate examines the principle causes, prevalence, and basic treatments of psychological disorders.