NIT1 Issues in Nursing Research 2 Competency Units

- The graduate understands the components of quantitative research.
- The graduate understands the components of qualitative research.
- The graduate understands the purpose of conducting a literature review and understands its relationship to educational or healthcare research and practice.
- The graduate understands how to select appropriate research topics and research paradigms.
- The graduate identifies, evaluates, and utilizes information resources in order to investigate specific research topics.
- The graduate critiques the data analysis, results, and conclusions in a research study.
- The graduate understands how to organize and develop a thorough and coherent literature review.
- The graduate understands basic concepts involved in the evaluation of data.
- The graduate completes a research proposal.